In October 1971, Parton released, with great pride, Coat Of Many Colors, so named for a song that recounted a true incident from her childhood. To date, Parton considers the title track her personal favorite of her immense catalog because of its autobiographical content and poignant message.

Dolly Parton has had more No. 1 records than any other woman in the annals of country music. She has won every award imaginable, including 1980’s People’s Choice Award, has hosted her own television show, starred in successful movies and has a star on the Hollywood Walk of Fame, yet this superstar never forgets where she came from.

In October, 1971, Parton released, with great pride, Coat of Many Colors, so named for a song that recounted a true incident from her childhood. To date, Parton considers the title track her personal favorite of her immense catalog because of its autobiographical content and poignant message. Born the fourth of twelve children in a one-room cabin in the hills of East Tennessee, the song Parton wrote of the coat her mother made for her from rags not only hit No. 4 on the country charts, but became the artist’s signature song. The lyrics are so close to her heart that she adapted them into a successful children’s book of the same name, published in 1994.

“My Blue Tears” was the other initial single release from the album Coat of Many Colors, reaching No. 17 on the country charts.

Once upon a Childhood Memory, I laid in Mama's feet by the old pedal sewing Machine that Mama used on so often. This particular time Mama was making me a little coat to wear to school the next day.

Mama was always singing songs to us and telling us Bible Stories. And one day Mama showed me the story of Joseph and the Coat of Many Colors from the Bible. And when Mama finished the part about how the brothers of Joseph sold him into Egypt, she told me how God always knew my favorite part from the Bible and the Coat that Mama was making for me was going to make the story more.

The Coat that Mama was making was not only to keep me warm but also to give me something pretty. I have my picture posed at school the next day. She was so excited she gave me a picture Mode in the newspaper and I was so excited about it and my Coat as well. She was so excited that she gave me a picture Mode in the newspaper and I was so excited about it and my Coat as well. She was so excited that she gave me a picture Mode in the newspaper and I was so excited about it and my Coat as well.

I was so proud of my Coat and I couldn't stop wearing it.玛

I have many memories of my Childhood Coat. One that touched me more deeply than my Memory of my Coat is the story of the children of the Great White Father and their little children with their Mamas. And to this day I still wear my Coat with a strong heart and a gentle heart.

This all Phonon is dedicated to my loving Mama and Daddy with all my love.
